MERCY HOME VISIT

The PG Department of Mathematics & Statistics conducted an extension activity to support elderly people living in an old age home. From June to March 2025-26, first-year and second-year UG students visited the nearby old age home, Mercy Home, once every month. Visiting elderly people not only helps to break their routine but also keeps them connected to the world around them.

During the visits, the students interacted with the residents and spent quality time with them. As a token of love and care, the students contributed lunch and provided some daily essentials for the elderly. They also promised to visit them more often and continue their support.

Through this activity, the students were deeply moved and learned many valuable life lessons. The experience inspired them to value and care for their parents and grandparents at home. Overall, the activity was highly rewarding and highlighted the importance of showing compassion and support to our elderly community members.
