Organized jointly by the Anti-Ragging and Anti-Drug Cell and the Grievance Redressal Unit, Mercy College, Palakkad

An awareness programme on anti-ragging and anti-drug use was conducted for first-year students on 9th July 2026 at Mercy College, Palakkad. The programme was organized jointly by the Anti-Ragging and Anti-Drug Cell and the Grievance Redressal Unit of the college, with the aim of educating students about the dangers of ragging and substance abuse, and promoting a safe and healthy campus environment. The session was delivered by Dr. Ambily Jacob K., secretary, Anti-Ragging and Anti-Drug Cell and the Grievance Redressal Unit, Mercy College, Palakkad, who provided valuable insights into the legal, psychological, and social implications of ragging and drug use. The speaker emphasized that ragging is a punishable offence and highlighted the strict measures implemented by educational institutions and authorities to prevent such activities. Real-life examples were shared to help students understand the serious consequences of engaging in ragging.. The session included information on the harmful effects of drugs on physical and mental health, academic performance, and overall well-being. The programme also introduced students to the support systems available within the college, including the Anti-Ragging Cell, Anti-Drug Cell, and Grievance Redressal Unit. Students were informed about how to report incidents confidentially and assured that strict action would be taken against offenders. The interactive nature of the session allowed students to clarify their doubts and actively participate in discussions. The programme concluded with a strong message on maintaining discipline, mutual respect, and responsibility within the campus. Overall, the awareness programme was highly informative and effective in sensitizing first-year students about the importance of maintaining a ragging-free and drug-free campus environment. If you want, I can make this more formal, add headings (like objectives, outcome), or tailor it to match your college report format.
